Research and conceptual design support in adaptive re-use projects and knowledge exchange networks.

Stellenbeschreibung

As RE-MakeCity enters an exciting new stage of development, we are looking for an internationally focused conceptual developer and researcher with an architectural / urban design background to investigate and build an EU- and international network on circular building, sustainable materials and adaptive re-use. We will establish Re-learning labs© and build strategic partnerships in Germany and internationally - between research institutes, universities and professional bodies. You should ideally be based in Berlin, with connections in - and knowledge of - the local and EU-international architecture/design/cultural scene. You would want to take the initiative on branches of the project, and create a solid foundation for make_shift gGmbH for the next years. Clear communication and related skills are important: a knowledge of layouts; presentation formats, and fluent German is a must!!
